

BRANCHES OF TENNESSEE STATE GOVERNMENT

Under the Constitution of Tennessee, the powers of Tennessee State Government are divided into three distinct or separate, but equal, branches or "departments": the Legislative, the Executive, and the Judicial. (Likewise, under the Constitution of the United States, federal government is divided into the same three branches.) None of the powers properly belonging to one branch can be exercised by any person in either of the other two branches -- "separation of powers".

THE EXECUTIVE BRANCH

"The Supreme Executive power of this State shall be vested in a Governor," according to Article III of the Constitution of Tennessee. The Governor is the highest state official. He heads the executive branch of the state government, and in this capacity as chief executive he is generally held accountable for overall administration during his term of office. He must see that the laws are enforced, that the taxes are collected, that public money is wisely spent.

He is the recognized leader of all the citizens in the State, and in addition, is the state leader of his political party. As such, the Governor has a strong voice in shaping the policies of the national party of which he is a member. The Governor is the spokesman for all the people of Tennessee in national matters and their representative where a single voice is needed in matters of concern outside the boundaries of the State.

The Governor is commander-in-chief of the "Army and Navy of this state" and of the Tennessee National Guard. The Governor has the power to grant reprieves and pardons, except in cases of impeachment.

The Governor is elected by the people of the state, specifically by the electors of the members of the General Assembly. He must be at least 30 years of age, a citizen of the United States, and a citizen of Tennessee seven years preceding his election. The Governor's term is four years, and he holds office until a successor is elected and qualified. Tennessee governors can now serve for additional four-year terms but are limited to no more than two consecutive terms. The succession provision was added to the Constitution in 1978 while the governor's term was increased from two to four years in 1953. The Governor is paid a salary of $85,000 and is furnished an official residence and expenses for its operation.

While the General Assembly has the sole power to pass bills, the Governor must receive every bill before it can become law. He then has the right to approve a bill by signing it into law; he can refuse to sign a bill, returning it with his objections in writing to the house in which the bill originated (that is, he can veto the bill); or he can fail to return a bill with his objections during the ten-day period he has to consider a bill after it is presented to him and the bill will become law without his signature. Every joint resolution, except those dealing with adjournment of the General Assembly and those proposing specific amendments to the Constitution (such as the tax relief for the elderly, low-income homeowner proposal which was approved by the electorate in November of 1982) must likewise be presented to the Governor for his consideration.

He has veto powers on joint resolutions as well as on bills. In addition, the Governor may reduce or disapprove sums of money appropriated in bills, while approving other portions of such bills. The portions approved become law, while the portions reduced or disapproved are void to the extent reduced or disapproved unless both houses of the General Assembly "override" such "item vetoes" by re-passing the bill or specific item, the Governor's objections to the contrary notwithstanding. A majority of the members to which each body is entitled is required to override veto (50 of the 99 members of the House and 17 of the 33 members of the Senate).

The Governor also has the right to call a special session of the legislature and to appoint judges and chancellors to fill vacancies caused by death or resignation.

To assist him in the operation of the government, the Governor appoints commissioners to head the various departments. These commissioners, plus some of the highest ranking members of the Governor's own staff, constitute the "Governor's Cabinet." Commissioners do not receive legislative confirmation. They report directly to him or to him through one of his staff members. While the commissioners are located in offices generally near Capitol Hill, the Governor and his staff are located on the ground and first floors of the Capitol.

If a vacancy occurs in the office of Governor during the first 18 months of the term, the person succeeding to the office vacated holds office until a successor is elected for the remainder of the original term at the next election for members of the General Assembly. If a vacancy occurs in the office after the first 18 months of the term, the successor holds office until the expiration of the original term.

When a vacancy occurs in the office of Governor due to removal, death, or resignation, the order of succession to the office is Speaker of the Senate (who serves statutorily as Lieutenant Governor of the State of Tennessee), Speaker of the House of Representatives, Secretary of State, the Comptroller of the Treasury, then the Treasurer.

THE JUDICIAL BRANCH

The Constitution provides that the judicial power of the State is to be vested "in one Supreme Court, and in such Circuit, Chancery and other inferior Courts as the Legislature shall from time to time, ordain and establish." The function of the judicial branch of government is to "interpret" the laws. The judicial structure of the State consists of the courts with purely local jurisdiction, such as courts of general sessions and municipal courts; regional or district courts of original jurisdiction empowered to adjudicate civil and criminal cases and cases in equity, such as circuit courts and chancery courts; and appellate courts, including the court of appeals for civil cases, the court of criminal appeals, and the State's highest tribunal, the Supreme Court, which hears both civil and criminal cases. The Constitution also provides for an Attorney-General and Reporter for the State in the judicial department and a district attorney and public defender for each circuit for which a judge having criminal jurisdiction is provided by law.

TENNESSEE COURT SYSTEM

The Supreme Court

The Supreme Court consists of five judges, of whom not more than two shall reside in any one of the three grand divisions of the state. The justices are elected in statewide retention elections for terms of eight years. The justices designate one of their members to preside as Chief Justice for a term of four years. The Supreme Court is required to meet in Knoxville, Nashville, and Jackson.

Every justice of the Supreme Court shall be at least 35 years of age and shall have been a resident of this State for at least five years before his or her election. The Supreme Court has jurisdiction to review all cases appealed from lower courts. Such appeals do not have to be granted, except for direct appeals of capital punishment cases. Supreme Court decisions are intended to resolve controversies arising out of questions of Tennessee law and serve as guidelines for future cases in lower courts. (In addition to the qualifications listed above for Supreme Court justices, there are additional qualifications of United States citizenship, Tennessee citizenship, and a license to practice law in this State.)

The following are currently members of the Supreme Court:

Frank F. Drowota, Nashville, Chief Justice
E. Riley Anderson, Knoxville, Associate Justice
Adolpho A. Birch, Jr., Nashville, Associate Justice
Janice Holder, Memphis, Associate Justice
William M. Barker, Chattanooga, Associate Justice
Cornelia A. Clark, Administrative Director; 741-2687.

The Lower Courts

Judges of circuit, chancery, and other lower courts are elected by the voters of the district or circuit involved. Such judges must be at least 30 years of age, shall have been a resident of the State for 5 years before his or her election, and shall have been a resident of the circuit or district one year. Terms of office are eight years. Chancery Courts are the traditional equity courts in Tennessee. Circuit Courts have jurisdiction to hear law cases and are not limited by a maximum monetary jurisdiction; circuit courts also have appellate jurisdiction over most minor courts. Criminal Courts have jurisdiction over cases involving persons charged with commission of a crime; they have appellate jurisdiction for misdemeanor appeals from lower courts. The next level includes courts of limited or special jurisdiction, such as Probate Courts, Juvenile Courts, and General Sessions Courts. The lowest level courts in Tennessee are Municipal Courts, which primarily handle municipal ordinance violations.

There are two intermediate appellate courts established by law -- the Court of Appeals and the Court of Criminal Appeals. The Court of Appeals hears appeals only in civil cases from the lower courts. The Court of Criminal Appeals can hear most felony and misdemeanor appeals from general trial courts, as well as post-conviction petitions. The Court of Appeals and the Court of Criminal Appeals each have 12 judges. These judges shall be not less than 30 years of age, shall have been a citizen and resident of the State for at least five years prior to appointment or election, and shall be licensed to practice law in Tennessee.

Attorney General

The Attorney General is the State's chief legal officer. The Supreme Court appoints the Attorney General for the State of Tennessee for an eight-year term.

The Attorney General is probably best known for representing officers and agencies of State Government in all civil litigation in state and federal courts. The Office of Attorney General also prosecutes all criminal cases in the appellate courts and has original prosecution rights in the areas of securities and state contract frauds. The Office also institutes civil actions for antitrust violations and consumer fraud. Besides courtroom duties, the Attorney General provides legal advice to state officers and members of the General Assembly. Opinions on interpretation or constitutionality of statutes are rendered to state and local officials on request.

The present Attorney General is Paul G. Summers, who was sworn in January 8, 1999.

THE LEGISLATIVE BRANCH

The legislative authority of the State of Tennessee is vested in the General Assembly, which consists of a Senate and a House of Representatives, both dependent on the people (that is, popularly elected). The name of the legislative authority may vary from state to state, but usually it is called the Legislature or the General Assembly. The official title in our state is the "General Assembly of the State of Tennessee," but it is entirely proper to refer to the "Legislature."

In general, the functions of the Legislature are to enact, amend, and repeal the laws of Tennessee. Some of the specific powers granted to the General Assembly by the State Constitution include: the appropriation of all money to be paid out of the State treasury, the levy and collection of taxes, and the right to authorize counties and incorporated towns to levy taxes.

The Senate is sometimes referred to as the "Upper House" while the House is referred to as the "Lower House". Each house is the judge of the qualifications and election of its members. A quorum of two-thirds of all the members to which a house is entitled is required to transact any business; a smaller number can only adjourn from day to day and may compel the attendance of absent members. Each house determines the rules of proceedings of its body, punishes its members for disorderly behavior and can expel a member.

Members are, except for treason, felonies, or breach of the peace, privileged from arrest during the session of the General Assembly and in going to and from session. Members shall not be questioned in any other place for any speech or debate in either house. Neither house can adjourn for more than three days without the consent of the other (gained by concurrence in a joint resolution).

The number of Representatives shall be 99 and shall be apportioned by the General Assembly among the several counties or districts as provided by law, within certain guidelines handed down by the courts since the Baker vs. Carr decision in 1965.¹ Each district shall be represented by a qualified voter of that district.

No person may be a Representative unless he is a citizen of the United States, at least 21 years of age, a citizen of Tennessee for at least three years, and a resident in the county he represents one year immediately preceding the election. The term of office of State Representatives is two years; and Representatives hold office for two years from the date of the general election, except the Speaker who holds office beyond the general election and until his successor is chosen even if he does not run for re-election or is defeated in the primary or general election.

Many of Tennessee's 95 counties have one or more direct representatives but smaller counties are combined into multi-county districts.

The House of Representatives shares the powers and duties of the General Assembly with the Senate, except that the House has the sole power to originate impeachment proceedings, which are prosecuted before the Senate.

The number of Senators shall not exceed one-third the number of Representatives and has remained at 33 by law since 1883 when the number of Representatives was increased to 99. Senators, too, are apportioned by the General Assembly among the several counties or districts substantially according to population.² Each district in the Senate shall be represented by a qualified voter of that district and, by law, each Senator must have been a qualified voter of his district for one year immediately before he seeks election therefrom. Also, no person may be a Senator unless he is a citizen of the United States, at least 30 years of age, and a citizen of Tennessee for at least three years.

² Williams v. Carr (1966), Kopald v. Carr (1972), White v. Crowell (1977), Lockert v. Crowell (1983), Lockert v. Crowell (1987). (TCA 3-1-102).

The term of office of State Senator is four years, with those from districts designated by even numbers running in one general election and those from odd-numbered districts running in the next general election. This process is generally referred to as "staggered terms." Senators represent one or more counties, or in the case of the four urban counties, represent a senatorial district within the county.

The Senate shares the powers and duties of the General Assembly with the House of Representatives, except that the Senate has the power to try impeachment proceedings initiated in the House. The Speaker is elected in a manner similar to that described above for the Speaker of the House.

When the seat of any member of the House or Senate becomes vacant and less than twelve months remain prior to the next general election for legislators, a successor is elected by the legislative body of the replaced legislator's county of residence at the time of his or her election. The term of any Senator or Representative so elected expires at the next general election for legislators. When twelve months or more remain prior to the next general election for legislators, a successor is elected by the qualified voters of the district of the replaced legislator. An interim successor can be appointed by the replaced legislator's county legislative body until such time as the election is held to elect a successor.

The General Assembly convenes on the second Tuesday in January of each odd-numbered year for an organizational session of not more than 15 calendar days, during which time no legislation may be enacted to re-convene no later than the Tuesday following the organizational session adjournment to commence its regular session. The General Assembly may then recess or adjourn from time to time as it shall determine. Members may receive their expense and travel allowances for not more than 90 legislative days of a regular session, nor for more than 30 legislative days of a special, or called, session.

The Governor or the General Assembly, by proper petition, can call the General Assembly into extraordinary session at any intervening time. Special sessions called by the Governor were held on Education in 1984, Corrections in 1985, Education and Finance in 1992, Tennessee's Bicentennial in 1996 and two different sessions on Taxation in 1999.

When the Legislature initially convenes, the first order of business is the swearing in of the members-elect. The two bodies meet in their respective chambers and the members take an oath of office swearing to support the constitution of the United States and the constitution of Tennessee and to perform their official duties impartially without favor or prejudice and to always protect the rights of the people.

The membership of each body then elects a presiding officer or speaker.

The Speaker of the House of Representatives is elected by the entire membership of the House. However, the majority party's nominee for the speakership is usually elected. The minority party sometimes nominates candidates for the post of Speaker, especially if the membership of the House is fairly equally divided between the two major political parties.

The Speaker of the Senate is elected by the members of the Senate for a two-year term (the lifetime of a General Assembly); and he, too, holds office beyond the general election and until his successor is chosen even if he does not run for re-election or is defeated in the primary or general election. The Speaker of the Senate does not have to be a member of that body. The Speaker of the Senate is, by statute, the Lieutenant Governor of the State and first in succession to the Governor, should a vacancy occur. (Tennessee is the only state with this means of choosing its Lieutenant Governor.)

The Officers of the bodies are then chosen. In the House, the Speaker appoints a Chief Clerk, an Assistant Chief Clerk, a Chief Engrossing Clerk, and a Chief Sergeant-At-Arms. In the Senate, all officers are appointed by the Speaker.

Each body then adopts its rules of procedure and the speakers appoint certain standing committees to give initial consideration to proposed legislation and report recommendations to the full body for action.
